

Data Science applications to E-commerce

Mayur Datar

Flipkart

E-commerce is a rich domain that lends itself to the application of diverse data science techniques. In this talk, we will provide an overview of some of the data science problem statements in e-commerce. We look at how data distributions play a critical role in decision making and how these data distributions are captured in the form of AI and machine learning models that are deployed in production.